

We used the same movement and fluidity of water, combined it with the floors required in the project, and came up with a series of fluid forms in the floors connected to the floors and convey this movement and excitement to the audience. And in general, we tried to make these fluid forms to bring the building out of the cold and soulless state and revive the building.