Memorial

The eight points pay tribute to the eight thousand missing persons, forming an enduring bridge of connection for their families.

These branches continuously channel water toward the main pond, symbolizing the significance and constant flow of collective memory.

The structure takes shape through pointed, subtly curved elements resembling petals, creating an atmosphere that combines aesthetic delicacy with profound structural resilience.

Furthermore, the site incorporates a comprehensive sustainability framework by integrating a water collection and recycling system that optimizes water use throughout the complex.

Finishes

They are selected based on criteria of color contrast with the surrounding environment, using light-colored tiles that are low-maintenance.

The precast drainage slabs incorporate the technology necessary to actively facilitate water filtration and reuse.

Planta

The architectural layout is based on the dynamics of confinement, where, in “Warehouse 9,” people remained facing one another in a state of absolute vulnerability and immobilization.

This pre-existing condition is reinterpreted in the design through a structure of fluid connectivity, which democratizes circulation and seamlessly integrates each of the zones, establishing a framework of universal inclusion.

Furthermore, all the volumes are elevated above the ground to mitigate environmental impact; a technical decision aimed at ensuring that the spaces adapt to the pre-existing ecosystems, rather than the other way around.
