

GLADIOLOS MEMORIAL

CONCEPT

A concept inspired by gladioli, flowers traditionally used in memorial anniversaries. They symbolize respect and honor, serving to keep the memory of a loved one alive.

This project envisions a memorial where memory and collective healing take physical form by projecting onto the site the exact star map from December 10, 1983—the night Argentina regained its democracy. This geometry defines universally accessible pathways and gathering points, allowing visitors to walk upon an inverted sky and forge an intimate, spatial connection with the lives stolen in the clandestine detention centers.

At the same time, the project performs an act of material justice: the rubble from the demolished structures of horror will be repurposed as raw material to build new, sustainable spaces. Through this tectonic transmutation, what was once an instrument of extermination becomes the foundation for a fresh start, symbolizing a society that chooses to heal and rebuild its future from its own ruins.
